

“ What makes LPC special?
Our Elders and Deacons respond:

• The statement expressed in this setting - we are a people of God. We are not ostentatious or excessive. We love God and each other, and we meet on this neat, well-tended campus (country vibe, rural setting, manicured lawn) to worship and hold each other in a community devoted to God, Jesus, and the Holy Spirit.

• The sense of community and kindness, whether toward each other or those we support through mission. We are fairly spread out, so the church allows people to gather and worship together. Activities grow from here, enabling us to contribute to various missions and care for one another like an extended family of sorts.

• The minister, music, and members. The dedicated people who are willing to pitch in and make things work!

Who we are

For more than 280 years, Lamington has provided our community with meaningful relationships, sacred space, worship and moments of fellowship, and service opportunities.

From our involvement in the American Revolution (John Honeyman, a personal spy for George Washington, was an active member after the war and is buried in our cemetery!) to our creation of the 19th century cemetery for Black members, we have evolved from a strong heritage.

This past year, thanks to the inspirational work of many of you, our doors were open when most churches were not, we improved our online presence to expand our reach, and we welcomed Caroline Jinkins as our new pastor!
